Madikwe is widely acknowledged as being one of the finest conservation areas in South Africa. The sheer, unadulterated wilderness of this place is breath-taking, and it is one of the few wildlife reserves in Southern Africa that is malaria free. The reserve lies within a transition region between Lowveld bushveld and Kalahari thornveld. As a result, the region is home to an incredible diversity of species from both ecosystems. Besides many other wildlife species, the Big Five can also be found in the reserve. Brown Hyena, Cheetahs and Aardwolf are some of the rarest animals and can be seen here.
